To the Members of the Class of 1910:

In presenting to you the Second Report of the Class of 1910 the Secretary owes you an apology. The lateness of the Report is lamentable, and can only be excused on the grounds that it was hoped that the contributions to the Class for the Triennial Celebration would be sufficient to cover the expenses of its preparation. Such, however, was not the case, and it was only by appealing to our ever-ready Class Treasurer that the necessary financial backing was found in the income of the Class Fund.

It is hoped that the number of errors in the Report is small and that they will be received in a charitable mood, even though it may mean that you are credited with an extra child or two.

The effort to raise our twenty-fifth anniversary fund on the installment plan is now well under way. From the start the project has been full of good promise and the generous and general coöperation which has been given makes its success seem certain.

Those of us who attended the Triennial last June and who saw the wonderful and spontaneous example of good fellowship that the Class set, will never have to be urged to attend another celebration. But some of the less fortunate members who for one reason or another were unable to be present, need to be urged to make every effort to attend every reunion of the Class and to help consolidate the spirit of congeniality now existent.

Every June the Class of 1910 will hold a spread on Commencement Day. This year and until further notice that spread will be held in Holworthy 15. Every year on Class Day the Class will take its place in the march to the Stadium. Let everyone who can help by his presence in making those occasions large and representative gatherings of the Class from year to year.

It will be a great help in keeping records of the Class if members will notify me at once of any change in address or occupation.

CLARENCE C. LITTLE, Secretary.

On August 27, 1913, with funds on deposit we purchased bonds as follows:

$2,000 United States Steel Corporation Coupon 5%, Nos. 174235 and 74752 for $1,000 each, due April 1, 1963.

$2,000 Northern Pacific-Great Northern 4%, Nos. 18454 and 18455, due July 1, 1921.

There are still a few members of the Class who have not contributed any amount to the Class Fund. This Fund is necessary to furnish sufficient income to meet current expenses and provide for the important notices and reports. It is only fair that each member of the Class should contribute towards the expenses, and every contribution, whether large or small, increases the Class activities.

It is earnestly hoped by the Class Committee that those of the Class who have so far neglected this duty will correct the oversight at once.

Respectfully submitted,

PHILIP WYMAN, Treasurer.

OBITUARIES

ALDEN EDSON BORDEN was born in Fall River, September 9, 1886. He died at his home, 739 Rock Street, Fall River, May 14, 1912. He was the son of Eric W. and Caroline C. Borden.

Following graduation from the Fall River High School he entered the senior class of Worcester Academy. After a year at Worcester he passed the examinations for the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, but later decided to enter Harvard, taking an elective course of four years. On leaving Harvard with the class of 1910, he entered the employ of the Massasoit-Pocasset National bank where his father is cashier.

He was an attendant of the First Congregational Church. His instructors and classmates will remember him as a good student, and a young man of gentlemanly, quiet tastes and sterling character..

GAMALIEL BRADFORD 3D was born in Cambridge, June 18, 1888. In the same year his parents removed to Wellesley Hills and his life was passed there until he entered college. He was educated in the Wellesley public schools, was a faithful and devoted student, and was graduated from the high school with the highest rank of any pupil up to that time. He was keenly interested in out of door activities, but preferred bicycle riding, canoeing, and tramping, to sports of a competitive character. In college he devoted himself especially to the classics and was always on the honor list. He completed his course in three years. While his college acquaintanceship was not of the largest, he had many warm friends. Quiet and almost shy in social intercourse, all who knew him well loved him for his singular straightforwardness, manliness, gentleness, and purity. Perhaps his two most distinguishing characteristics were an entire and whole-hearted absorption in the pursuit of any object which greatly interested him and an unfailing fairness and sense of justice in appreciating the point of view of others. After leaving college, he engaged in business with the firm of N. W. Harris and Company. He died on the eighth of August, 1910. The distressing circumstances of his death were undoubtedly due to nervous exhaustion and depression of which the foundation was laid by overstudy in school and college.

JOSEPH BREWER, JR., son of Joseph Brewer and Helen Slocum Brewer was born August 6, 1887, at Cohasset, Mass. His earlier education was obtained at a small private school in Milton; later he attended Milton Academy, from which he was graduated in the spring of 1905. He preferred, however, to take an extra year at school before entering Harvard. While in school Brewer excelled in all branches of studies, particularly in mathematics and physics. He found time, however, to enter into athletics with that interest and determination, which was so typical of his every act and undertaking. During his short college career he made a host of friends, to whom his sad death on the 21st of April, 1909, was a severe shock and a tremendous loss. Although the profession, for which he was fitting himself, required hard work and consistent application, he, nevertheless, was gifted with such a remarkable degree of concentration, that he stood well up in his classes, and at the same time entered into literary, social, and athletic activities.

Quick to grasp new subjects, gifted with an excellent memory, a thorough, systematic mind, unusual concentration and equipped with a strong determination and the means to master all subjects with which he came into contact, everything pointed to a remarkably brilliant and successful life. Although all his time was taken up with one activity or another, Brewer would always cheerfully give as much of his time as was necessary to help out others, who were less gifted than himself. One instance of this spirit of generosity stands out in the writer's recollection, when Brewer, took it on himself to tutor the writer through two courses, patiently explaining and re-explaining points which must have been ridiculously obvious to him.

And with all his love of study, he had a deliciously spontaneous sense of humor, which is often lacking in minds such as his. In fact, it was this remarkable balance of qualities which pointed so strongly to a career of usefulness to mankind, pride to his family and friends, and glory to his college and country. The memory of Joseph Brewer, Jr., will always be clear in the minds of his friends, for what stands for cheerfulness, earnestness, kindness, and usefulness—may it serve as an example for all of us.

JOHN EDMUND DWYER, son of Timothy Caleb and the late Mary Virginia Dwyer, was born in Somerville, November 13, 1887. He was graduated from the grammar and high schools of Somerville and from Harvard College in 1910. After leaving college he first engaged in the insurance business but later became the Boston representative of the John C. Moore Corporation Company, of Rochester, N. Y., manufacturers of office ledgers.

He attended his class triennial at Misery Island, Monday, June 16, also the Harvard-Yale baseball game, June 18. On his return home he was taken suddenly ill and the next day was operated on for appendicitis. Subsequent complications necessitated a second operation but not having the needed strength to rally he died at midnight June 25, 1913. The funeral was held at Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden.

FABIAN FALL, December 26, 1887-August 17, 1909. Son of Charles G. Fall (1868) and Emily B. Fall, of Boston. When a child he was in Mrs. Shaw's Kindergarten and when a lad in the Volkmann School. During the school year of 1899-1900 he was in the Lycée in Tours, France; the next year in an English school in Dresden; the next year in a German school in Berlin; the next year back at Volkmann's. And always a blue-ribbon boy. In June, 1903, he passed his preliminaries for Harvard with marks enough to admit him. In October he matriculated at New College, Oxford, but could not be admitted till he passed his university examination. He had had no Greek but in seven weeks he learned enough to admit him at the December examination. He was not quite sixteen.

At Oxford he played soccer for his college and rowed in thirteen races in crews which won. In June, 1906, he entered Harvard. As he had come from another college he was not eligible for athletics, but he was put on the varsity squad. Because of this exclusion he went out for the Crimson and became ultimately its manager and president. At the end of his freshman year his rank was such he was offered his degree, but he preferred to take it with his class. He was in the Stylus, Dickey, Institute, Gas, and Signet, and when he died had been appointed on the Student Council for his senior year. His portrait bust is in the Crimson Sanctum; his medallion is in the College Library. A book entitled "Words with Wings," by his father, is his Memorial.

For Lycidas is dead, dead ere his prime,
Young Lycidas, and hath not left his peer,
Who would not sing for Lycidas?

FREDERIC HILBORN HALL was born in Cambridge, Mass., November 13, 1889, the son of Professor Edwin Herbert and Caroline Eliza (Bottum) Hall. He entered college from the Cambridge Latin School and won a Harvard College Scholarship in 1907. He wrote the sophomore class song for 1910, was a member of the Harvard Dramatic Club, Memorial Society and played on the class tennis team. His utter devotion to the ideals which he had chosen made him admired of his friends, and his cheerfully helpful spirit, often more eager for the success of others than for his own triumph, made him beloved. We have lost in him, not only a man of great promise, but one of great achievement in the vision of nobility he has left with his fellows.

EDWARD ARTHUR HEALEY, the only son and the second of three children of Edward Converse and Ida Carver Healey, was born in Dorchester, Mass., August 5, 1888. He graduated from the Edward Everett School, Dorchester, in 1902, and from the Boston Mechanic Arts High School in 1905 with a postgraduate course ending in 1906. In 1910 he graduated from the four year course in the old Lawrence Scientific School with the degree of S.B. The next year he served as assistant in electrical engineering, at the same time studying for the degree of M.E.E. that he received in June, 1911. He had been reappointed assistant for 1911-1912, but on July 20, 1911, while testing a cotton machine for Professor C. A. Adams in the shop of the American Tool and Machine Company, Hyde Park, Mass., the testing machine broke and injured him so severely that he lived only four hours after the accident. He was buried at Lowell, Mass.

Until 1909 he lived on Pearl Street, Dorchester, when he moved with his parents to Greenwood, Mass. Here he became actively interested in the work of the Wakefield Universalist Church. At college he was a member of the Electrical Club and the Mechanic Arts High School Club. His scholastic standing won him scholarships all four years of his course.

With high ideals and a splendidly courageous optimism, in the face of much adversity he worked steadily on year after year. Though many gifts were vouchsafed him at birth his education and technical training came almost entirely as the result of his own indefatigable efforts. A keen wit and a lively sense of humor won him many friends, but his loyalty and simple sincerity endeared him to all. And as he was a faithful friend so was he a kind and loving son and brother.

"To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die."

MCGREGOR ADAMS KING was born at Chicago, Ill., January 28, 1886. He died at his home in Chicago on February 14, 1912, after a severe attack of pneumonia. He was one of those few men who are great because they are lovable. During his four years at the university, and in his two years of business, the happiness of his own life and the keen personal interest he felt in the success of those he came in contact with endeared him to all. At the very start of his freshman year his congenial spirit and his kindness of heart made him well known. Not having the physical strength to make any of the freshman teams, he was determined to do something great for Harvard. He became the coxswain of the freshman eight, and the amount of time he spent in studying and trying to improve the watermanship of his men proved he was willing to do, in his own way, as much work as one of the oarsmen. During his sophomore and junior years he coxed the university four; his senior year, the university eight. His loveliness gave him a remarkable power of being able to enthuse a tired oarsman with the indomitable spirit of victory that has done so much to maintain the rowing prestige of Harvard. The honors he won on the river and in the social life of the college were of peculiar importance to the university itself in proving the great truth of Harvard democracy and broadness; that no matter from which school or what part of the country a man may come he will be welcome and judged by his fellows upon his own worth.

DAVID AUGUSTUS McSTERLING was born on January 18, 1884, at Kingston, Jamaica. Coming to this country with no assets but grit, determination and high ideals, he began and maintained under the face of discouragements and ill health a fight for higher education, in order that he might return and aid others of his race to gain education and its advantages.

He entered college from Andover and aided by a few friends, his untiring courage bore fruit and he finished his college course, though broken down in health.

The class is proud of him and his record and although he reached his home in Jamaica only a few weeks before death overtook him and defeated the purpose for which his life was consecrated, he left forever a mark of high devotion and honor before his classmates which few of us will ever attain and none of us surpass.

OBITUARIES

HAROLD JOSEPH MANNING was born in Manchester, N. H., June 7, 1885, fourth son of Charles Henry Manning (S.B. Harvard, 1862) and Fanny (Bartlett) Manning, he being a decendent in the tenth generation of William Manning, one of the first land owners of Cambridge, 1634. On his mother's side a decendent of Bailey Bartlett, high sheriff of Essex County, Mass., for forty years, and a nephew of Major-General William Francis Bartlett, one of Harvard's best-loved sons. He passed through the public schools of Manchester leaving the high school in the fall of 1904 and entered Riverview Military Academy, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he remained one year, and entered Worcester Polytechnic Institute for the year 1905-6, and in the fall of 1906 entered Harvard . . .

Late in 1907 his health gave out and the rest of his life was spent in endeavors to regain his health. In the latter part of 1909 he went to Monrovia, Calif., where he passed away suddenly on July 2, 1910.

WILLIAM ROBERT PEARMAIN, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner B. Pearmain, of Boston, died September 28, 1912, at the age of twenty-four years and six months. He graduated at Milton Academy in 1906 and entered Harvard College that autumn. After passing with credit his freshman examinations, he left college to go abroad and study art with George Deforest Brush, whose daughter, Nancy Douglas Brush, he married in 1909. During the last two years of his life, which he divided between New York City and Dublin, N. H., he became so overwhelmed with the misery of the poor and the odds against which they struggle, that he decided to give up the profession for which his talent and his love of the beautiful fitted him to an unusual degree, and devote his life to an attempt to understand and improve the conditions of the laboring class. To this end, leaving home and friends, he became a workman at the Westinghouse plant in Pittsburgh. Constitutionally delicate, unused to hard work, sensitive to the horrors of the life and conditions by which he was surrounded, his strength soon gave way and he returned home broken in health, but undaunted in his purpose to return to his work at the earliest possible moment. Three weeks later he died of acute leukaemia, facing death as quietly and unflinchingly as he had faced life. His wife and daughter Mary survive him.

S. B. P.

MELLEN CHAMBERLAIN PEIRCE, JR., was born in Bangor, Maine, July 13, 1886. He died there after a brief illness November 11, 1909.

He entered Andover Academy in 1903 and played end on the football squad, and broke the school record for the pole vault in the Exeter-Andover meet in May, 1904, with a mark of 11 feet, 1 5-8 inches.

He graduated from Andover and entered Harvard in 1906, where he played substitute in the varsity squad and was a member of the swimming team his two years of college life.

Always vigorous and athletic, he was camping with a party of friends in the autumn of 1909 and acting as volunteer guide, his canoe led their four guides down the quick waters of West Branch of the Penobscot River.

He was coaching the football team of the University of Maine when taken ill.

The dangerous nature of his illness was not suspected until three weeks later, when Dr. R. C. Cabot of Boston was summoned and diagnosed the case as leucemia, a rare disease, the cause and cure alike unknown. A few days more, and this loyal, generous, brave, young life ended in the mystery of death.

M. C. P.

STUART DOUGLAS ROBINSON, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson (Corinne Roosevelt), and a nephew of Theodore Roosevelt, was born on March 19th, 1889.

He attended St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., from 1901 to 1906. While there he played goal on the hockey team which tied Harvard 2-2 in 1906; sang in the choir for three years; ran on the track team; acted in the school play in 1906; and rowed on one of the club crews in 1905 and 1906.

He entered Harvard College in the fall of 1906. Here he was well-known and well beloved by his classmates. He was a member of the Sphinx, Hasty Pudding, and A.D. Clubs, and was substitute goal on the champion varsity hockey team of 1909 at the time of his death in Cambridge, February 22, 1909.
